

Konstantina Poulianiti was born in 1982 in Trikala, Greece. Mrs Poulianiti received her bachelor in Chemical Engineering in 2006 from the Department of Chemical Engineering of the National Technical University of Athens, Greece. She worked as a Quality Assurance Manager in dairy industries and as a Technical Adviser at European Projects Management Company. Mrs Poulianiti was awarded a Msc in Exercise & Health in 2012 from the Department of Physical Education and Sport Science of the University of Thessaly. Currently as PhD student in the biochemistry of muscle, with Christina Karatzaferi as a supervisor, Konstantina looks at renal disease's effects on oxidative stress and other indices. As a co-author she has published 1 research article in a peer-reviewed journal. She is a member of the Muscle Physiology and Mechanics Group.